"Monotheism and Child Sacrifice" with Judith Braun—For centuries the Catholics and Jews have been sworn enemies. Only now, after two millennia of distrust and contempt, the world's ancient religions have finally come together as leaders of these religions, both popes and rabbis, are united in rare agreement that child sexual abuse is allowed, as long as it is done in secret and its victims are buried deep under the fear of God.

9:45 to 10:00

"Michael's Story: Innocence can Prevail" with Sam Unglo—Sam will share the story of his brother Michael, lost to the scars of child sex abuse, and will describe the importance of understanding the victim's perspective. He will discuss how we can drive positive change one-by-one to respond to surviving victims and prevent future abuse.

10:00 to 10:45 AM

"Forgotten Memories on Trial: The Criminal Prosecution of Paul Shanley" with Dr. James Chu In 2005, defrocked priest Paul Shanley was tried in Massachusetts for the abuse of a boy in his parish 20 years earlier. At the time of the trial, the boy was a 27 year-old man who was the chief witness. He claimed to have recovered his memories of the abuse three years earlier. However, the defense attempted to portray the victim as a troubled man who was falsely accusing Shanley as a way of excusing his own personal failures and to gain financial status or notoriety. Shanley was ultimately found guilty, but intense controversy has continued to swirl around the idea of whether childhood memories can really be forgotten and later recovered.
